The.Luminescence (PL) studies of the Nd(III), Eu(III), Tb(III), Yb(III) and Y(III) families of luminescent lanthanide ions in anhydrous and solvent-free phosphor glasses have been carried out at X-ray fluorescence (XRF) and luminescence spectroscopy (LS) facilities to understand the luminescence characteristics of the various rare earths. Present work suggests the large potential for anhydrous phosphor glasses in the present era of R&D in luminescence glasses and its possible application in image intensifier tubes (IIT) and plasma display panels (PDP). Photo-luminescence of the lanthanide family of rare earths is discussed in detail. Results obtained show the possibility of localization of the lanthanides in the various grains within the host matrix. Y(III) has been localized in a particular grain or crystallite of the host matrix.Q: Saving Default Button in iOS App In my iOS app I have used a UIActionSheet to change some of the settings in my app. However, when I close the UIActionSheet and open my app again, the defaults button has been restored and I don't want this to happen. How do I prevent this from happening, or do I have to save the settings elsewhere, when I close out the app, or is there a way to save the buttons that have been selected? A: You don't have to save it anywhere else, the action sheet changes the settings automatically. The only way I can think of if you want to save the settings is to keep them with user defaults which can be accessed from code. import React from'react'; import cx from 'classnames'; import { PropTypesOf } from '@phosphor/prop-types'; import { FormLabel, FormGroup, FormSection, FormControlLabel } from './Form'; const FormSectionLabel = ({ children, className,...props }) => (6d1f23a050
